NORTH HAVEN TRAINING WALL IMPROVEMENTS

Minister for Lands, Tony Kelly, said work is due to start next week on the training wall at North Haven in Port Macquarie to improve conditions for the public using the foreshore access..

Mr Kelly said the Camden Haven River was one of 21 coastal rivers with breakwaters and training walls under the management of the Department of Lands.

“The proposed improvements follow recent consultation by Lands with local residents and Port Macquarie Hastings Council concerning the needs of cyclists, pedestrians and recreational fishermen.

“It is a very popular recreation spot and the works will enhance the community’s enjoyment of the area.

“The works, costing about $45,000, involve the topping up of rock revetment along a 170 metre portion of the access way, repairs to the safety fence and the provision of a ramp to access the path.

“The major work involving the placement of 250 tonnes of rock will commence in the first week of June and take about one week.

“Every effort will be made to minimise disruption during the work, however access will be restrict at various times.

“The works are being carried out under the Lands’ minor ports program with the Soil Conservation Service providing site supervision.

“The Rees Government is committed to investing in coastal infrastructure along with the ongoing maintenance and upgrading of Crown reserves,” Mr Kelly said.
