

Monday, 28 September 2009

LPMA FEATURES IN SURVEYING INDUSTRY AWARDS

Minster for Lands, Tony Kelly said NSW Government surveyors have been highly commended for their innovative approach to online service delivery.

Mr Kelly said that the Land and Property Management Authority (LPMA) was a winner at the NSW Awards for Excellence in Surveying and Spatial Information on Friday, 25 September.

“The Land and Property Management Authority received this accolade for its ePlan Portal which allows clients to lodge plans electronically,” said Mr Kelly.

“The judges said ePlan used innovative software and efficient web design to develop a complete new approach to the land titling process,” Mr Kelly said.

“ePlan was developed by LPMA and provides a faster, more secure and more efficient way of processing land titling plans in NSW.

“LPMA is a Gold Sponsor of these important survey industry awards, having sponsored the awards for NSW Professional of the Year and the Young Professional of Year for several years now.

“The Professional of the Year is Grahame Wallis, a senior manager at LPMA who is also a distinguished leader in the profession.

“Grahame is recognised for his expert technical knowledge and is highly regarded as a leader in the surveying industry.

“The Young Professional of the Year is Rachel Brown, a surveyor with Monteath & Powys in Newcastle who is very active in professional development and the mother of two young children.

“Winners of five of the award categories will go forward to the National Asia Pacific Spatial Excellence Awards in Perth on November 12,” Mr Kelly said.

Media Contact: Alex McGregor on 0404 015 556